Morley tries to keep cool for the summer months...

Words and pics: Ben

We've not had the Cortina five minutes and we're already cracking on with making it better. My main concern is that if it's going to be my daily driver, I want to be sure that it's not going to let me down at any point. Now, I realise that these cars managed perfectly well 40 years ago, but there is no harm in protecting against what might happen today. With that in mind, and given that summer is just around the corner, the first job will be to fit an electric radiator fan to keep things cool when I inevitably get stuck in traffic somewhere on the M25.
